

STEVE HOWEY

Nick Wagner on ABC's "High Potential"

Steve Howey is an accomplished film and television actor best known for his role as Kevin Ball on the award-winning Showtime series "Shameless," where he starred alongside William H. Macy and Emmy Rossum. Most recently, he led the CBS action series "True Lies," executive produced by James Cameron and McG.

On the big screen, Howey has appeared in a range of studio comedies and action films, including Fox's "Stuber" with Kumail Nanjiani and Dave Bautista; Netflix's "Game Over, Man!" produced by Scott Rudin, Seth Rogen and Evan Goldberg; as well as Warner Bros.' "Something Borrowed" opposite Kate Hudson and John Krasinski. He also starred in "Bride Wars" for 20th Century Fox with Hudson and Anne Hathaway, and was seen opposite Jamie Foxx and Dave Franco in "Day Shift" for Netflix.

His television work spans both comedy and drama, with appearances in "Sons of Anarchy," "Jennifer Falls," "New Girl," "Psych," and his breakout role as Van Montgomery on the long-running sitcom "Reba."
