Erin and Sara Foster were named co-heads of creative for the tech app Bumble in 2020. "Erin and Sara are true forces of nature and have already brought so much value to our brand and our culture," said Whitney Wolfe Herd, Bumble founder and CEO. They also went on to become advisors to the workout system Mirror, which was sold to Lululemon in 2020 for $500 million. In 2021, the Foster duo launched a new podcast series titled "The World's First Podcast," covering topics including therapy, wellness, relationships and business. Its authenticity saw the two of them hosting their first live podcast taping in February 2024 to a sold-out New York City crowd. The show won an iHeartRadio Podcast Award for Best Pop Culture Podcast and was a Webby honoree for Best Co-Hosts.

Recently, Sara served as an executive producer on the successful television series "Nobody Wants This" for Netflix. The show, starring Kristen Bell and Adam Brody, has been nominated for the Golden Globes®, Emmys® and Critics Choice Awards and is an AFI Awards honoree. The second season premiered in October 2025, and the third season is currently underway. After the success of "Nobody Wants This," Erin and Sara signed an overall deal with 20th Television, under the Disney umbrella, to develop new projects.
